

Steps to follow to help discourage rodents from your backyard include:

1. Eliminate Food Sources:

- Store pet food in airtight containers.
- Clean up spilled birdseed and keep feeders clean.
- Harvest ripe fruits and vegetables promptly.

2. Remove Shelter:

- Trim back overgrown vegetation and bushes.
- Clear away debris like piles of wood, leaves, or stones.
- Fill in any burrows you find.

3. Seal Entry Points:

- Inspect fences for gaps and repair them.
- Block any holes in walls or foundations near your home.

4. Use Natural Repellents:

- Plant mint, lavender, or other strong-scented herbs.
- Sprinkle cayenne pepper or garlic powder around the perimeter.

5. Install Barriers:

- Use hardware cloth or wire mesh to cover vents and openings.
- Consider installing a fence that goes at least a foot underground.

6. Encourage Predators:

- Create a welcoming environment for natural predators, like owls or hawks, by installing birdhouses or perches.

7. Regular Maintenance:

- Keep your yard tidy and regularly check for signs of rodent activity.
- Dispose of garbage properly and keep trash bins sealed.

8. Monitor for Signs:

- Look for droppings, burrows, or gnaw marks to catch potential issues early.

By combining these strategies, you can significantly reduce the likelihood of rodents making your backyard their home!
